PREFACE

The Disaster Services Directory is the result of INFO LINE of San Diego County's database expansion to include disaster services that might benefit San Diego County in the event of a future disaster. Information has been collected for general disaster response and recovery services, focusing on nongovernmental agencies. While INFO LINE's database expansion for this project has targeted voluntary agencies, we have included a section for governmental services at the end of the guide (see page 30).

National and international organizations whose missions include disaster relief services play a significant role in local disaster relief. Some of the national organizations listed are members of San Diego and Imperial Counties Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster (SDI VOAD), and can therefore be contacted locally. (See the following page for a list of SDI VOAD member and affiliate organizations.) Others are members of the national VOAD and while they do not have local representatives, they may be available to provide assistance in San Diego County. Also included here are local agencies that are willing to offer their existing services at a heightened capacity in the event of a major local disaster.

This publication follows on the heels of the Wildfire Recovery Services Directory, for which information was collected in Spring 2004, focusing specifically on programs serving victims of the October 2003 wildfires. This directory takes a step back and, instead of listing programs related to wildfire recovery, lists programs and services related to general disaster response and recovery. However, it would be incomplete without information about some of the local community recovery groups which formed in the wake of the October wildfires. Although these groups have missions specific to wildfire recovery, they are citizen-led initiatives that would prove to be invaluable resources were another disaster to occur. As a result, these wildfire recovery community groups are listed on page 29.

Many agencies in San Diego County are in the process of incorporating disaster relief services into their mission statements, in conjunction with the work of SDI VOAD. As a result, we expect to expand INFO LINE's database and revise this directory, as needed, to incorporate the disaster planning and preparedness efforts of local organizations with a focus on agency capacity during disaster relief. Our goal is to present an accurate picture of voluntary, nonprofit, and faith-based organizations in San Diego County that have the ability to provide disaster relief services. Organizations that are not listed here, and that may be able to provide disaster response and recovery services in the event of a future disaster, are encouraged to call INFO LINE at 858-300-1200.
